

COUNTY MAN WANTS TO BE INTERNAL REVENUE COLLECTOR

J. C. Sutherland Goes to National Capital With Large Delegation

MAKE STRONG BID FOR OFFICE

Contests for appointments to lucrative offices under the incoming administration are already under way, and when President Harding comes to make selections he will no doubt have a large list of prominent Republicans to select from. Many of these appointments, it is anticipated will be made early in the administration of the new President, and candidates are now busy in looking after their opportunities for favorable consideration.

With a delegation of supporters from Washington county J. Chester Sutherland of Washington, arrived at the national capital on Wednesday and took up with the Pennsylvania Senators his candidacy for the position of collector of internal revenue at Pittsburgh under the new administration.

Senator Penrose received the delegation first and suggested that the friends of Mr. Sutherland take the matter up with Senator Knox, pointing out that Senator Knox will take an active part in distributing patronage in the western end of the state.

In the party which called upon the Senators were County Chairman C. E. Carothers, deputy secretary of agriculture, Sheriff Alexander B. Gray, Registrar of Wills John Allen, District Attorney Erwin Cummins, County Recorder August Valentour, County Commissioners J. E. Johnston and James W. Walker, County Treasurer R. G. Lutton, Prothonotary H. E. Pollock, Clerk of Courts E. C. McGregor, and Sealer of Weights and Measures John F. Curran. The party was escorted by Representative Henry W. Temple of Washington county.

Daniel B. Heiner, who held the position under a former Republican administration, announced his candidacy for the same office several days ago.

GREAT GAME FOR FRIDAY EVENING

The leading attraction, so far, this basketball season, will be the game to be played at the high school gymnasium, tomorrow evening, when McKeesport will try issues with the locals. Charleroi and the McKeesport teams are now tied for first place in the race, each having won five consecutive games, and the forthcoming contest promises to be one of the most exciting ever played on the local floor. The game is scheduled to start at 8.00 o'clock, promptly. This will be necessary in order to allow the visitors to catch their return train for home.

STATLER HOTELS REDUCE FOOD PRICES

A general cut in prices averaging 15 per cent on 223 items on the bills of fare of the Statler hotels operating in Buffalo, Cleveland, St. Louis and Detroit, and the Statler operated Hotel Pennsylvania in New York, has been announced. The biggest cut is in the luxury class of foods. Prices of sea foods will be reduced from 5 to 25 cents and ice cream 5 and 10 cents a portion. Pork and veal will be reduced 25 cents a portion.

MID-YEAR CLASS FINISH THIS EVENING

The concluding event in the graduation exercises of the Mid-Year Class of 1921 will occur this evening in the high school auditorium, when its members will receive their diplomas. These are to be awarded by J. S. Russell, member of the school board. The speaker of the evening will be Dr. John Carey Acheson, president of the Pennsylvania College For Women of Pittsburgh, Pa. The mere mention of the name of this distinguished educationalist, whose services are in constant demand in matters pertaining to the progress of our schools, should be enough to warrant a large attendance; and, as a compliment to his professional standing, as well as his willingness to serve on this occasion, it is the wish of our school authorities that Dr. Acheson's appearance here will be greeted by a representative gathering of the friends of education in this community. An interesting program will be presented. Admission will be free. The exercises will begin promptly at eight o'clock.

RESUMPTION WILL AFFECT LOCAL MINES

Official announcement has been made that at least ten open-hearth furnaces, the 134-inch plate mill, the slabbing mill, as well as several other departments, including the rail mill of the Cambria Steel company at Johnstown, would be in operation not later than February 1, although no assurance was given that the operation of these mills would be regular after that date.

This schedule of operations is earlier than had been anticipated and developments of the next week may assure steady work in all of them, and possibly in some other departments.

The resumption of work at these mills will affect the industrial situation in Washington county, because much of the fuel for their operations comes from this section of the valley.

Odd Fellows Will Burn Mortgage on Their Property

Charleroi Lodge, No. 1030, I. O. O. F., has prepared a special program for a meeting to be held Friday evening, which will be of unusual interest to the members of the organization and their friends.

In addition to a visitation by the Grand Master, Frank B. Shannon of Pittston, Pa., and Deputy Grand Master Dick, of Pittsburgh, the burning of a mortgage on property owned by the lodge at the corner of Fifth street and Washington avenue will have a prominent place on the events of the evening.

The property in question, which faces 60 feet on Fifth street and extends back about 100 feet on Washington avenue, was acquired several years ago by the lodge, on which a

INJUNCTION WAS GRANTED BY COURT

In the suit of Alexander & Co., Monongahela bankers, against S. M. House, Rella House and Samuel House, her husband, heard before the court at Washington on Tuesday, an injunction has been granted restraining S. M. House and also Rella House and husband from selling or converting a certain 60-acre tract of land in Bentleyville, except it be done with due notice from them to the purchaser of the claims that Alexander & Co. set up in this case.

The banking firm became creditors of S. M. House when the latter took over the printing plant of the Monongahela Times Publishing company in Monongahela. He gave certain judgment notes to the printing company, which were assigned to Alexander & Co.

The contention of the suit against Mr. House was that he was conveying this tract to his parents for the purpose of defrauding his creditors. The court's adjudication places the matter in "status quo" until the rights of all concerned have been adjusted.

The court does not deny that Mr. House has a perfect right to make the gift of this land to his parents in view of what they had done to rear and educate him, but before making the gift, the court says he should have taken care of his creditors.

NUMEROUS ACCIDENTS ON MONESSEN ROADS

A slip from the side of the hill on the Donora-Monessen road on Sunday resulted in several auto accidents. A Cadillac touring car owned and driven by F. Cooper, formerly of Donora, struck the obstruction and skidded off the road, being badly smashed up. No one was hurt. A Maxwell touring car and a Ford roadster were also damaged during the day by coming in contact with the debris.

SAYS HE WANTS TO PLEAD GUILTY

Despite the fact that counsel secured for the prisoner is at present engaged in preparing his defense, Albert Smith, pyromaniac and self-confessed firebug, at present confined in the Fayette county jail, insists he does not want to stand trial, rather wishing to plead guilty to eleven counts of arson and then "go back to his home."

"I want to do nothing but tell the truth," said Smith Monday night when interviewed. "If they let me loose now I'd never set fire to another building. I'm tired of being in here. I attended Sunday school from the time I was little and if they'll let me plead guilty now I'll go back home to mother and Sunday school and they'll have no more trouble with me." Smith repeated much of his original confession Monday night, stoutly insisting that he had no aides in the destruction of property, that he did not know Frank Koma, another firebug, until the men met in the Fayette county jail. He likewise insists that he does not want to stand trial, admitting there is no use because he "wants to plead guilty."

He still complains of severe pains in the head, but in spite of this his appetite is said to be good, and he has taken on considerable flesh since he has been a prisoner in the jail.

Were Taken to Uniontown Last Year from the Old S. S. Terminal

FAYETTE CO. WILL PROTEST

It is reported that the general offices of the Monongahela Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which were transferred to Uniontown last summer will be moved back to Pittsburgh. Just when this change is to be made is not announced.

Just why this change is contemplated is not given out, but possibly officials believe that it would be to the better interests of all concerned that the Division be operated from Pittsburgh rather than from some outside point. Uniontown and other sections of the coke region will likely make a vigorous protest against any removal, but whether they will be able to bring sufficient measure or present sufficient evidence to stay the hand of the railroad company officials in the matter is yet to be shown. The removal of the offices to Uniontown was looked upon more or less as an experiment, and if it has been decided to bring them back to Pittsburgh it is evidence that the officials have been convinced that the experiment was not a success.

Uniontown people point out the importance of the coke region as a freight producing center, being possibly one of the most prolific in the United States, a fact which should have considerable weight with officials in determining this important question. It is also pointed out that coal developments in the southern Monongahela valley promise to be on an extensive scale within the next few years many new operations already being under way, these to be reinforced by others within the next few months. Should the Monongahela Division offices be returned to Pittsburgh it is likely pre-war conditions would be restored as to the field of operations which would be under the jurisdiction of these local officials. As it is now, that portion of the P. V. & C. north of Duquesne is operated as a part of the Pittsburgh Division of the Pennsylvania.

ENGLAND DISCRIMINATES

American thermos bottles are being kept out of England while those from Japan or Italy may come in, according to the testimony of John B. O'Brien of the Flint Glass Workers' Union, before the Ways and Means Committee. This statement made the members of the committee sit up and take notice. Mr. O'Brien stated that the Icy-Hot Company, an American organization, had been unable to do business in England because of British regulations. It seems the concern had secured an order for 500,000 vacuum bottles to be marketed in London by a large drug company, but when application was made for a license to enter the merchandise, it was refused. The British importing company was informed, however, that it could import similar merchandise from Japan or Italy, and O'Brien offered to furnish the committee with a letter signed by an officer of the London drug company to this effect. At the same time, the witness continued, the British have placed what amounts to an embargo on glass articles of American manufacture, while at the same time German goods are finding their way into the American market via London. Evidently Great Britain wants to pay some of her indebtedness to this country with German goods instead of with British gold and there is a considerable un-American element among our people who favor this sort of business. The Ways and Means Committee does not.

STUDENTS TAKE A HAND

The students of the George Washington University, located in Washington, D. C., are taking a deep interest in the question of tariff revision. An importer of glassware, recently testifying in opposition to the proposed rates on chemical glassware, carried in the tariff bill now pending in the Senate, declared that those rates would make the cost to students on their glass requirements from $15 to $25 annually as an addition to their laboratory fees. The students of the G. W. U. promptly refuted this statement with figures showing that during 1919 and 1920 the cost of American made chemical glassware was from $4 to $8. During these two years European competition was at a low ebb because of depressed conditions there. If the American manufacturers are permitted to retain an American share of the domestic market, university students need have no fear of exorbitant prices for their chemical glassware.

Fearless women of New York seem to be more successful in catching thieves than the police. One recently captured a burglar with a spoon, which he mistook for a revolver. Another tripped up a burglar and sat on him till the police arrived. A third, on finding a burglar in her bedroom, collared him and "held him against the wall" until help arrived. So far so sensitive feminist has protested that a woman has "equal rights" with a man to be shot by a burglar.

A prize fight staged for the benefit of devastated France by the daughter of J. Pierpont Morgan brought out society and netted $100,000. Devastated France might have got considerably more but for the fact that the slugger, like the opera singer, must have 50,000 thousands for every "appearance." However, it would be asking a good deal of two sluggers to invite them to beat each other up just for war orphans.

Although this country is the record breaker in the matter of libraries, Prof. Burgess Johnson estimates that sixty million Americans "never see a book" and that not more than four per cent of the people ever enter a bookstore. This can hardly be more than a rough guess, but it is no doubt true that the Americans who extend their reading beyond the newspapers and the most popular magazines are relatively few.

"Mabel is engaged to a young man she met on her vacation." "That so?" "When is the wedding to be?" "She doesn't know that. She's got to wait and see whether or not he's going to write to her. It may be that he'll just forget about it, you know."

Oldtime Toys

In England during the eighteenth century there were no makers of toys of the better class and for the children of the wealthy the silversmiths made toys of gold and silver, while Sheraton and Chippendale made doll furniture in mahogany and reproduction of the Chinese style for the palaces and the aristocracy of the society of the day. The toys of the poor were of the American toy ball, lead soldiers, cast iron and tin and little more interesting than the flat wooden dolls of the Egyptians of 2100 B. C.; cheap mechanical toys and dolls of fanciful design but little beauty belonged to the time of King James I.

A House of Hearts

A "heart" home is that of the wife of a doctor in California. The tables, chairs, etc., in fact, all the furniture of the peculiar house are heart-shaped! The owner's bed has a heart-shaped headboard supported on both sides by bedposts carved to represent Cupid's arrow. The heart-shaped headboard is decorated with a heart-shaped picture frame in which two angels embrace each other! The remarkable house is named the "Pericardium," which means the membrane enclosing the heart and the great blood vessels.

Afraid of the Classics

A farce comedy recently opened in New York with the title "The Merchant of Venus." The critics praised it, and it was apparently destined for a long run, but despite the fact it was in the smallest theater in town very small audiences came. The manager discovered that people thought it was a burlesque of a Shakespearean play. He changed the name to "Because of Helen" and the theater was filled every night thereafter.—Atlanta Constitution.

What He Thought About It

It was a beautiful summer night. My little boy and I sat on the balcony and looked off into space where thousands of tiny points of light hung like jewels. Donald was silent, and as I wondered how the beauty of the scene affected him, I finally inquired: "Of what does it remind you, son?" "Why, it's just like an old tin pan punched full of holes."—Chicago Herald and Examiner.

The Lake Poets

The Lake Poets, the Lake School, the Lakists, were names given by British critics about the beginning of the past century, to a certain brotherhood of poets, who "haunted for some years about the lakes of Cumberland, England," and who were erroneously thought to have united upon some settled theory or principles of composition and style. Wordsworth, Southey and Coleridge were regarded as the chief representatives of this so-called school, but Lamb, Lloyd and Wilson were also included under the same designation.

The Old Beech

The old beech kept me dry enough while the rain beat steadily on his head, but he knew how to preserve the downpour for his own needs. From the mass of the leaves it passed to the ramage of the twigs that bore them and gaining in volume, descended as a trickle to the branches and a brisk fountain to the boughs. Then the many channels met at the fork, to run down the bole in a torrent and vanish under the moss-covered earth.—Eden Phillpotts.

Sea Gulls

There are more than 50 kinds of gulls to be found all over the world. Most of these are marine or sea-dwelling birds, though several species are found near bodies of fresh water, like the Great Lakes and other inland seas. As there are many kinds of gulls, so, too, they have many names, some of which possess real charm and interest. Among them are the arctic gull, the goose gull, the herring or silvery gull, the Iceland gull, the kittiwake, the laughing gull, and the seamews.

MEMBERS' MEETING OF COAL AND COKE ARE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE SOMEWHAT INACTIVE

The first members meeting of the newly expanded Chamber of Commerce will be held tomorrow night in the Municipal Building at 8 p. m.

Its primary object is to adopt the Constitution and By-Laws which have been prepared by the By-Laws Committee consisting of Hugh Ferguson, Chairman; K. W. Daly, Walter Byerly and John B. Schafer. The standard form of By-Laws used by nearly all the modern Chambers of Commerce throughout the United States is to be presented to the entire membership for consideration and final adoption.

The meeting will also take the form of a "Get Acquainted" gathering as the committee have arranged a social program of singing and refreshments. Michael Rosenbloom will speak on "Service to the Community." The Field Secretary urges every member to be present as he states the success or failure of the Chamber depends upon every member taking an active part in the activities.

Continued inaction with decreased production on the part of the independent operations marks the Fayette county bituminous field this week. Steam coal, for such sales as are reported is selling around $2.25 and $2.50. Some coal which has been caught on the track has been sold at a lower figure, it is reported, but such sales have been practically negligible. Many mines supplying low volatile coal have been closed, although there is fair demand for low volatile steam coals from Pools 9, 10, 71 and 1. By-product coal is around $2.75 and furnace coke at $5. with foundry coke about a dollar higher.

There is continued suspension and cancellation of contracts where consumers can find causes to do so. New contract negotiations have not yet assured any great proportions, although the amount of "contract fishing" has increased considerably during the past week. Operators, however, appear to be playing a waiting game.

Frick coke plants are operating five days a week, and Frick coal mines are running six days a week. There has been no official discussion of wage scale revisions. Frick circles continue to deny any plans for readjustment of wages scales.

EASTERN PLANTS SLOWLY RESUMING

Reports from the east indicate that a number of plants are resuming, although on restricted time. The Remington Arms Company at Bridgeport, Conn., employing 3,500 persons has resumed on a three-day week basis, with acut in wages. Warner Brothers, corset makers, with 3,000 employes, have increased their time four hours weekly under a wage cut, and the Locomobile Company cut wages 10 per cent, but continued on regular time schedule for 400 hands.

RENT INCREASE MAY BE REGULATED BY LAW

Rent increases of more than 10 per cent, except in cases where unusual repairs or alterations have been made would be held "unjust, unreasonable and oppressive," under a bill introduced in the House at Harrisburg by Representative William H. Martin, of Wilkesburg. The bill refers only to dwelling houses.

Origin of Slang Term.

"Chaff," as a slang phrase, refers to the throwing of chaff instead of birdseed to allure birds; and consequently we get the phrase an old bird is not caught with chaff, that is a wise man, with all his wits about him, is not to be deluded by humbug. But "you are chaffing me," springs from an entirely different source. Here the reference is to the French word chaffeur to cook, chaff to vex, and the English expression still survives in the phrase to "roast" a person, which does not necessarily mean to cook him, although he may become heated.

Mandolin Supplanted Lute.

An aristocratic musical instrument, still found, but very popular in the middle ages was the lute. At the present day its direct descendant—the mandolin has all but entirely supplanted it. The lute is the "ud of the Moors, even in its very name—el-ud which means merely "the wood." It was introduced by the Saracens at the time of the invasion. From Spain it gradually spread over Europe, as also did its contemporaries the "gittern" and "rebec." All three were favorite instruments in medieval Europe.

Superstition Dying Out.

Until comparatively recent times the Channel islands, and, indeed, most inhabitants of the remoter British islands, were notoriously superstitious. Improved communication with the mainland and the spread of education have largely driven out superstitions which were long in vogue. —Henry Gauvain in letter in the London Times.

Hazlitt's Conversation.

Some admirer of his was astonished to find that his conversation was so ordinary. Could this be the author of "Table Talk?" It was a gentleman who evidently expected Hazlitt to speak essays. Enough for him to have to write them! He considered himself off duty when he was not at work or something he had thought of. —Stoddard.

Gratitude.

A clerk employed behind the counter at a post office in the south of England recently rescued a young girl from drowning. In order to show their appreciation of the young man's bravery, local residents have decided to purchase their stamps at his post office. —London Punch.

ECSTASY IN THE SALESROOM

Goaded "Prospect" Finally Forced, in Self-Defense, to Rise to the Occasion Himself.

"But this is such a sweet little model, honey. Perfect on you. Look at the quality of this daintyn, dearie. Now, honey, did you ever see such one?"

There may have been heroes of great opera who could make love with the fluency and intensity of a salesgirl drawing near to a sale, but no expert exists whose ardor can thus flame when the actual moment of decision between the higher and the lower comes, writes Marian Storm in the New York Evening Post.

Flocks of little girls that buy these little suits just leave off their little blouses and wear them like little one-piece dresses. Now, this little style, dearie, was made for you. Look, honey, not a wrinkle in back. Isn't it love, is on her?"—appeals to another enraptured creature—"Isn't she just the little girl to wear this little model? Of course, not every one can wear this little suit, dearie. It takes a figure, honey, just like you've got. I wear the same suit myself."

"Dearie, in two weeks you couldn't buy this little suit for half the price again. Isn't it lovely on me? I said, honey, when you came in. There's the girl that can wear that little special we got today." Now turn around, dear. You won't have to do a thing to it. Length—just right, honey. Sleeves—just right, honey.

"Sweetness," she urged, at passionate climax, "don't let a little chance like this go by! Dearie, if you only buy this little suit for half the price again. Isn't it lovely on me? I said, honey, when you came in. There's the girl that can wear that little special we got today." Now turn around, dear. You won't have to do a thing to it. Length—just right, honey. Sleeves—just right, honey.

"But, oh, my beloved," returned the goaded customer half fiercely. "The price! The price!"

INVOKED NAME OF HARVARD

How Indignant Boston Woman Was Pacified by Assertion Which Some-what Overstepped Truth.

The burying ground on the Boston common has what is probably the most unusual stone in the city. It was set up "in memory of Mrs. Sally Morse (wife of Samuel Morse), who died July 25, 1799, of the cramp in her stomach, after about one hour's illness, aged twenty-six years and two months."

One day, relates the Detroit News, the door of the cemetery office in the city hall was flung open and a pompous matron entered and requested that the stone on the common be destroyed, because of the indelicate and unladylike inscription. The visitor waxed more insistent as the secretary pleaded a lack of authority to destroy anything. Finally the caller took a dramatic stand and demanded that some action be taken while she waited. The secretary happened to be a great admirer of George Washington, but he had work to do, and he saw one way out.

"Madam," he whispered impressively, "that stone is of great value. Harvard university has just been making an investigation and has pronounced that stone important evidence of the first authentic case of appendicitis. Madam," he continued, "that stone cannot be destroyed."

At the magic name of Harvard the visitor retreated, vanquished, and went forth to tell her friends of the "appendicitis stone," as it came to be called.

Gulf Coast Sulphur Deposits.

At some remote time there must have been tremendous volcanic activity in the region which is today the gulf coast of Louisiana and Texas; for in those parts are found deposits of sulphur vastly exceeding in quantity any known elsewhere in the world. They are covered over by hundreds of feet of later sedimentary material, and to get at the sulphur deep wells have to be sunk. Superheated water is forced down the pipes to melt the sulphur, which is fished to the surface by the power of compressed air. On cooling it is ready for shipment, being 99 per cent pure.

It is said that it is harder for a Lancashire farmer to understand a Lancashire miner than it is for any two Americans from different sections of the United States to understand each other. The reasons advanced for the wide use of textbooks, and the fact that our public schools are forced to devote much time to the teaching of English on account of the large number of foreigners in the schools. There are many provincialisms in our language, but most of them have been scattered over the whole country and are understood by all.—Exchange.

Drawing an Audience.

Professor Lorentz—"I'm delighted to see so large a gathering in the house. I never spoke to an audience of more than 40 before. Your towns men are interested in science?"

The Local Editor—"Not much. But my composer in setting up the ad of your lecture on the "Cosmic Forces," left the "out" of the "Cosmic."

Her Suspicion.

Mr. Gellman—"I see a Brooklyn woman has applied to the courts for help from being 'axed to death by her husband, who she says kisses her on the cheek every day."

Mrs. Gellman—"Oh, understood by a man can do so easily with a wife that he has to apologize as to the way."

HAD TO OVERLOOK FOIBLES

Herbert Spencer's Fussiness a Trial to Those Who Did Not Know His Real Kindness.

More examples of Herbert Spencer's irritating foibles and extraordinary pettiness are superfluous, but two of them will bear the telling.

A friend had the opportunity of seeing in full working order the famous ear-stoppers that Spencer used to wear. Probably some frivolous remark of the friend obtained him this privilege, for in the middle of the meal Spencer, with a fixed glance at him, pressed the spring that closed the hole of each ear.

After luncheon the host and friend sat chatting in the garden, when there came an invitation from Spencer to take a drive with him in his rubber-tired carriage, the message adding that "we are not to talk."

When they were returning from Spencer's funeral Sir Michael Foster told this friend the following story:

Spencer osteated cushions, and the trouble was to find a chair that was hard in the seat and yet comfortable. So, at a last resource, he had a seat covered with some inches of soft plaster of paris, and sitting on that made an impress from which a wooden seat of an exactly fitting pattern was cut.

Against a certain undeniable fact, Spencer had a soft place in a heart that seemed adamant, and there are stories of spontaneous acts of kindness and of offers of help to the troubled and bereaved that redeem much unlovely behavior.

HE HAD BUSINESS ELSEWHERE

Diner Didn't Care to Wait to See the Result of His Carelessness With the Pie.

Dr. Fabyan Franklin has a friend who vouches for this story. Coming downtown on the elevated one morning, he was struck by the explosive temper of a red-faced, choleric man on a seat nearby. This man, annoyed because a youth facing him had placed his feet on the seat which the man occupied, burst out in a storm of passion, denouncing the youth in tones that aroused the attention of passengers in the adjoining cars. He finally stamped out on the platform at a drop, booming with rage.

That noon Doctor Franklin's friend went to a self-service restaurant for lunch. Getting a plate of vegetables and a pie, and one of pumpkin pie, he placed them on the broad extension arm of one of the chairs provided for lunchers, and made room beside them for his cup of coffee. As he was finishing his lunch he reached for the pumpkin pie, and clumsily knocked it off the chair arm.

To his horror he saw it disappear into the gaping pocket of a large overcoat carelessly flung over the next chair—and then he perceived the owner of the overcoat hearing down upon him, all unconscious of the accident, with a plateful of food. It was the same red-faced, choleric man whose frightful temper had amazed the elevated passengers!

As soon as the culprit had perceived that he wanted to see no more.—New York Evening Post.

An Expressman.

Speaking of juries, a veteran Clevelander recalls the difficulty experienced in securing a jury in a noted alleged poisoning case of many years ago.

One of the men summoned was both dense and deaf, with a limited knowledge of English, defects which were developed as his examination proceeded.

"Have you formed or expressed any opinion regarding this case?" the lawyer for the defense asked.

"Yes," he answered, "I have formed or expressed—formed or expressed—do you get that?"

"Yes, yes. Formed or expressed. Sure, I have formed and now I am expressing. That's all right."

But the expressman was excused.

The modern use of oil of amber, both externally and internally, is often mentioned. It has been denied that amber was known to the Greeks in very early times, the Greek electron having been used as a name both for it and for an amalgam of gold and silver, a species of gold ore washed down by the Paeonians; but amber has actually been found at Mycenae, and the fact that the electron necklace mentioned in the Odyssey is said to have been a gift from Phoenicia means much.

The Phoenicians are known to have introduced amber into the East, and Herodotus says it was brought from the River Eridanus in the extreme west of Europe.

Pets of Prisoners.

Visitors to prison have noticed that prisoners, like other folk, are fond of pets and that their pet is generally a canary or other species of bird. There is a reason for this: A bird takes up little room and requires little food, whereas larger animals could not very easily be kept in confinement. Most prisons have rules forbidding inmates to keep pets, but visitors to some of the smaller prisons have sometimes observed mice as well as birds and an occasional dog sharing cells with prisoners. In one of the large state prisons a certain prisoner was permitted to keep as his pet several dogs of the dog.

LITTLE STORY CARRIED STING

Must Have Shown to Readers the Neglected Industrial Possibilities of the South.

D. A. Tompkins, the father of the cotton-oil industry, who built his fortune on his inextinguishable faith in the industrial possibilities of the South, was fond of quoting this little story about a Georgia funeral, says his biographer, Dr. George Taylor Winston, in "A Builder of the New South."

"I attended a funeral once in the cotton country, Georgia. It was a poor, one-galley fellow. They buried him in the midst of a marble quarry; they cut through solid marble to make his grave, and yet a little tombstone they put above him was from Vermont. They buried him in the heart of a pine forest, and the pine coffin was imported from Cincinnati. They buried him within touch of an iron mine, and yet the nails of his coffin and the iron in the shovel that dug his grave were imported from Pittsburgh. They buried him by the side of the best sheep-grazing country on earth, and yet the wool in the coffin hands and the coffin hands themselves were imported from the North. The South did not furnish a thing on earth for that funeral but the corpse and the hole in the ground. There they put him away and the clouds rattled down on his coffin and they buried him in a New York coat and a Boston pair of shoes and a pair of breeches from Chicago and a shirt from Cincinnati, leaving him nothing to carry into the next world with him to remind him of the country in which he lived and for which he fought four years but the chill blood in his veins and the marrow in his bones."

The romance languages are the languages sprung from Latin and bearing its impress strongly in vocabulary and grammar. It is usual to speak of seven or eight romance languages, even though such a division is not always scientifically accurate. These are Roumanian, Roumanian, (Rhetoric, Latin), Italian, French, Provençal, Spanish and Portuguese to which may be added Catalan, Franco-Provençal, Sardinian and Dalmatian.

Expansion of Water.

While nearly all substances are heavier in solid form than in the liquid state, ordinary ice is lighter than water and will float in it. This is due to the fact that as it approaches the freezing point water begins to expand, and when it freezes, it expands so as to increase its volume about one-ninth. This expansive force is sufficiently strong to break glass and earthen pitchers and to split open great rocks in the crevices of which water has frozen.

The Dog Watch

"Dog-watch" is a corruption of "dodge watch." On board ship there are two sorts of watches—the "dog-watch" of four hours, and the "dog-watch" of two hours, but, strictly speaking, a watch means four hours. The dog-watches are two short watches, one from 4 to 6 in the morning and the other from 6 to 8 in the evening, introduced to "dodge" the routine, or prevent the same men always keeping watch at the same time.

Make Them Your Friends.

All our poets have been men of deep and firm faith in God, and his goodness, and no boy or girl could spend a more enjoyable or profitable hour than in the company of any of these great and noble men. They are the pioneers of progress, leading men on and up to the serene heights of holiness and Godlikeness, and there they shine forever like great silent stars in the deep night sky.—Edith M. McKenna.

WORLD'S DEBT TO CHINAMAN

Celestial Is Directly Responsible for Improvement in the Breeding of American Porkers.

The economic genius who figured out that all that was needed to bring unbounded prosperity to the cotton mills of New England was to add half an inch to each Chinaman's shirt tail never carried out his project, but the Chinaman, without announcing his plan, has done something quite as remarkable: He has added inches to the legs of the American pig.

He has not done it alone. He has had help from the East and West Indies and from our own farmers in the South. The process was simple and was just another instance of a great industry altering itself almost unconsciously to meet new conditions, the Nation's Business states.

Not many years ago the prizes of the pig world went to the round, short-legged type, the kind of hog that you couldn't see under. The chief purpose in the life of that hog was to turn corn into lard. Now it's the pig type that is popular, the pig that makes more lean meat, more bacon and more ham.

What has done it? For one thing the Chinaman and his soft heart, corn, cottonseed and peanut are furnishing a vast amount of lard substitutes at prices lower than the pig can supply his product. So the four-legged lard factory is turning to the ham business and the Chinaman, his shirt tail unlengthened, has added to the legs of the American hog.

Accidental Colors.

Accidental colors are those colors which depend on the state of our eyes, and not those which the object really possesses. Thus, after looking at the bright sun, all other objects appear dark; after dark color is the accidental color of the bright sun. When again, we come from a dark room, objects at first often have a yellow tinge. This is especially the case after wearing blue glasses, for a minute or two after one has taken them off. The accidental color of red is bluish green; of orange, dark blue; of violet, yellow; of blue, white—and the converse.

A Brief Triumph.

The most embarrassing moment of my life happened during my college days, writes a correspondent. We were all sitting at the dinner table of the college boarding house, each trying to outdo the other in intellectual remarks. I had just finished what I considered a particularly bright comment. I lifted a cup of coffee to my lips with an air of triumph when suddenly the chair I was sitting on collapsed and I sank to the floor, allowing the cup of steaming coffee to pour all over my face and clothes.
